The 2015 Rebula / Ribolla Gialla is unoaked, without malolactic fermentation and comes in at 12.3% alcohol. Solidly built, this is a beautiful Ribolla (as most will know it, based on Italian fame). Mouth-filling, fresh and packed with dry, clean fruit, this rolls around the palate and seems to grab it all. It is a wine with a beautiful, lingering finish, too, and a serious demeanor. If you're looking for a simple, fruity little white in a fresh style, the price may say that, but the wine says it is something much more. Do not misunderstand—as it airs and warms, it shows nice fruit too. It is a fine bargain that can age and develop. It should hold well, perhaps even better than suggested.
